

Radhika Piyush Goyal Saving Millions Citizens Globally Global Social Good

United Nations global sustainable goals are creating positive impact globally, saving human life and protecting environment, wild life. Radhika Piyush Goyal is global sustainability leader and working for global social good, improving the life of millions of mumbaikar and billions of Indians also citizens globally. Plants improve greenery and protect the environment from depletion of soil, air, water quality. In India, globally citizens, government organisations can take small steps to increase global social good. Radhika Piyush Goyal was in Harvard University USA when a small idea of global social good clicked in her mind and then she started working on it. Working on several global good initiatives she is also pushing the concept of food for all globally. As per climatic conditions of every region government organisations can promote plantation of sapling with fruits in public places, state, national highways which can grow easily in 12 months - in general every government have budget for plantation, the initiative is simple but meaningful, plants like mango, guava, papaya can grow with low cost investment. Currently this concept is pushed in all the states of India and we are also requesting government organisations across the globe to promote this initiative in all regions of their country. This small initiative will also help local citizens in rural india to promote fruit commerce, planting more saplings, increasing global good for agriculture, greenery, creating jobs, sustainable development.

Radhika Piyush Goyal is working on the path of doing global good, collecting good, continuing the good work of Honourable Shri Vedprakash Goyal and Honourable Smt Chandrakanta Goyal who dedicated their life for the improvement of Mumbai, Maharashtra and India.
